LB 305, 543

they will not be looking elsewhere for jobs immediately. The...as far as Senator Chambers and his history, I agree with him. I think there are a lot of people that really don't know their history. And if they keep repeating it in the wrong way, eventually they believe it. There are other people that do know their history, but they're a revisionist. They like to revise history the way they'd like to have history happen. They...there's a lot of people that say there was no such thing as slavery, or there was no such thing as the Holocaust, there was no such thing as some of these terrible things we've had in our...happen in our history, our actual history. So I agree with him on that. And I think we have to educate our children and our adults as the true history of what's happened in the past, and especially in our own country. So I don't disagree with him, but I do disagree on bringing this bill back. Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Thank you, Senator Engel. Senator Wehrbein.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Mr. President, members, I'm going to rattle around here on being an economist, on one hand, and then on the other hand. I honestly don't know what to do. I've been supporting this all along, the loan forgiveness program, because I haven't found anything better. And I kind of wish some other people would speak on this issue, to know where they think we ought to go. Because if we take this bill,...I am open to something different besides teacher...the loan forgiveness, if I thought there was a better way. At this point, I haven't found one. We don't have what we want exactly in LB 305. I don't know if there's override capability in here if LB 305 would go through like it is. Some say we need the sales tax in LB 305 to make anything go. Is there the guts in here to go ahead and override a veto on LB 305, or are we going to have nothing? Is loan forgiveness the way to go? And I don't know whether that's the way to go. I am really struggling as to what is the most focused way. I guess I still come back to this bit...this loan forgiveness being an answer that is as good as we've got, and maybe better. And it's funded. I like what Senator Thompson said about the focusing, that we can adjust those. I've long felt that we ought...if we have the teacher shortage in some
